

Week 2

A quick description of the report, to provide more context.

Simplified Flip 7 System

Input

- Hit: You instruct the dealer to draw one more card from the deck.
- Pass: You signal to the dealer you pass to safely bank your points for the round.

Process/Rule

- The player passed and is not active for this round anymore
- If the player flips a card that matches any of their existing cards, player busts.
- If the player flips a unique card, the card value points are added to the running total.
- If the player flips 5 cards, you win.

Output

- Deck has less cards and new chances for each card.
- Player has gained points and is active
- The player has passed, kept existing points and not active
- The player has busted and gained no points

SITUATION 1

Step 1

Drew card 5, thats a lot of points but now I have more chances of getting a duplicate.

Step 2

Drew a 2, that's not bad... there's only one more card I'll have to worry about.

Step 3

Wow! The risk pile is getting very scary. There are only 4 safe cards for me in the deck.

Step 4 & 5

Wow! I got the 1 card, that does not change my risk pile at all.

Of the 3 safe cards, Out of 11 cards, I drew one of them.

“In noticed, I stopped caring about the value of the card (number on the card), rather the risk the new card brought me.”

“Even tho the probability of me drawing 5 different cards in a row was very unlikely, it still happened. It made me feel good but also confused.”

SITUATION 2

Step 1

Drew a 4, nice higher card

Step 2

Oh no! I drew the top 2 valued cards in the deck. After drawing 2 cards, my odds of picking a duplicate is already more than picking a safe card.

Step 3

Phew! Somehow drew the 1. That does not seem so bad.

Step 4

Somehow feels like the game is in my favor.

Step 5

I celebrated too quickly... The odds were not in my favor.

“I thought I was unstoppable after step 4, but then got hit with reality. Is this how gambling feels?”

SITUATION 3

Step 1

That's not bad.. I guess

Step 2

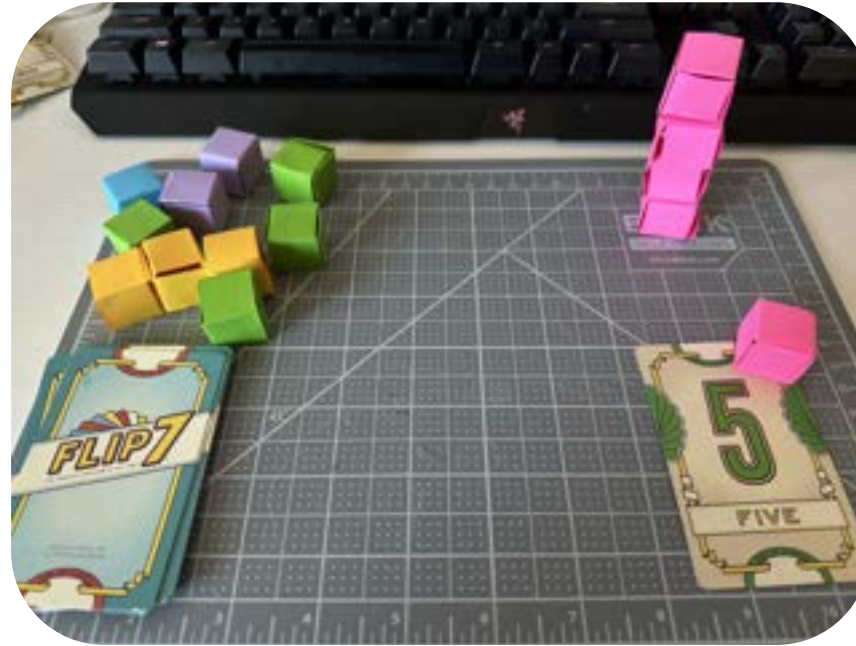

Oh no! I already lost...

“Even though the odds were in my favor, or maybe I was overconfident, I still lost.
Does this happen throughout life?”

SITUATION 4

Step 1

That's not bad.. I guess

Step 2

So far the odds don't look too bad...

Step 2

I'm too scared to continue...I'm gonna pass.

“My previous situations, influenced me to not keep going this time.”

How does fear influence people's decisions?

Fear of losing influenced my final situation. Does this happen in daily life?
Are there moments where fear outweighs the odds?

Thank You!
